

Master Supervision: Art Therapy Following Community-Wide Trauma

Abstract

Mass shootings, terror attacks and violence are on the rise. This master supervision session will explore how art therapists are being called on to help communities respond and recover from these events.

Therapists will engage in critical conversations to understand the importance of trauma specific training and the need to work with other mental health professionals in order to bring the most comprehensive, cohesive web of resources to their communities.

Participants will discuss interventions with traumatized individuals, identify resources for trauma training, learn effective ways to collaborate, review successful partnership and community outreach efforts.